Enginuity Acquires SECCO's Commercial Mechanical Division

Mechanicsburg, PA July 8, 2016: Enginuity acquired, effective immediately, the commercial mechanical division of SECCO Incorporated. SECCO's residential and commercial electrical divisions remain under their original ownership.

"We are delighted to have the dedicated mechanical folks from SECCO on the Enginuity team", said Jim Mooney, CEO of Enginuity. "SECCO's clients will benefit from the deep technical talent of our office staff and field technicians and, since our company cultures are very similar, they will continue to enjoy the same focus on client satisfaction they've had for years".

"SECCO will continue to provide electrical construction and maintenance services, along with our residential brands; Pronto Plumbing, SECCO Home Services & Quicktricity Electric Service. This move is an effort to provide our technicians and staff with more career opportunities and our customers with more value. Enginuity joins us in appreciating the loyalty of our long-term customers and Craig Drabenstadt and I are committed to helping make the transition smooth and worry-free," said Barry Kindt, President of SECCO.

Enginuity provides value driven engineered solutions to complex and urgent mechanical problems for industrial, healthcare and commercial clients throughout Pennsylvania with offices in Mechanicsburg and Williamsport. www.innovationRIGHTnow.com
